China replaced the US and has been Germany's largest trading partner since 2017. Moreover, the amount of German investment in China ranks second among European countries, after the United Kingdom. So it is likely that trade and investments between Germany and China will increase in the future. With this trend, both for inbound business and outbound business, China is starting to stride into the spotlight.

In our seminar, we will provide you with the most relevant legal and tax issues for German investors in China as well as for German companies with current or prospective Chinese investors. We want to discuss with you strategies to avoid unexpected risk due to Sino-German business relations and help you to benefit from the markets in and investments from China. We sincerely look forward to your attendance and hope we can bring you some insights into these issues as well as some inspiration for your future business.

Topics of the seminar:

- Investments from China to Germany
 - Practical experience with Chinese shareholding in Germany
 - The “typical” strategy of a Chinese investor
 - Current foreign investment rules in Germany and China
- Investments from Germany to China
